MITCHELL, THE STORM PETREL QUILTS

THE AIRPLANE SERVICE WILL NOT SAIL THE BLUE

Will Not Ride In Fuselage Carrying the Star Emblem of Uncle Sam's Service—His Criticism of Army and Navy Officers, Who Were His Superiors, Was Detrimental to the Good of the Service—Resignation Accepted by President Coolidge.

ment's viewpoint, made the Mitchell case a "closed incident." From the viewpoint of Colonel Mitchell and his friends in and out of congress, however, the resignation is merely a stepping stone from a restricted activity to complete freedom that civilians enjoy but which army officers are denied by service regulations and traditions. It is an open secret that Mitchell intends to take advantage of that freedom, immediately his resignation is effective, by resuming with redoubled vigor his attacks upon the air policies of the war and navy departments, which led to his trial and conviction.

Sentences Boy to Go to Church and Read Bible

Porterville, Cal.—Floyd Jefford, eighteen-year-old Porterville youth, must attend church or Bible school every Sunday for four months, according to suspended sentence pronounced by Judge W. B. Haines.

Jefford was charged with possession of liquor and was fined $100 or 100 days in jail. If he attends church or Bible school regularly for the next four months and no more charges are preferred against him the sentence will be withdrawn.

Judge Haines declared there was much greater need for kindness and guidance in juvenile cases than for punishment.

FORD STOCK MAY BE SOLD TO EMPLOYEES

The Ford Motor Co., has announced that profit sharing certificates will be available to employees February 1. Issuance of the certificates was temporarily discontinued last April 1, when a $25,000,000 quota was reached.

The plan under which employees received each six months a share of Ford company profits originated in January, 1920. Each employee is permitted to deposit from his pay check an amount not to exceed one-fourth of his total pay. Formerly the limit was one-third. When $100 is accrued the employee is given a certificate guaranteeing the holder 6 per cent on his investment.

MEETINGS AT MEMORIAL HALL DREW CROWDS

Farmers Were Entertained With Addresses and Music—Hugh Diamond on Hand.

All roads led to the Memorial hall Friday. The farmers came into the city early to attend the morning session of the institute which opened at 9:30 o'clock.

The address of welcome was made by John D. Hummel, who is a past master in this welcoming game. His address was well received and he was roundly applauded. The invocation was given by Rev. G. J. Troutman. The address of Mrs. Dora Sandoe Bachman, a Columbus lawyer and educator whose subject "What Does Rural Life Mean to You," was most interesting. Clarence Henry, a farmer of Hebron, spoke on the subject "The Brood Sow and Her Litters" and this was most instructive. The vocal solos given by Miss Helen Marion and John Gallaher, with Miss Abbe Mills Clarke as accompanist, were very pleasing.

The afternoon and evening sessions were well attended. The principal drawing card was the Scotchman, Hugh Diamond, the Galion humorist. In the evening Mr. Diamond brought along his "fiddle" and rendered some old home-like tunes. Mr. Diamond said he couldn't see why Henry did not call for him to do some fiddling to broadcast.

Mrs. Bachman and Russell G. East also spoke and "Bob" Brehmer, of the Ford company, told the audience "What We Are Doing in Circleville" and he told them something, he always does.

The High School orchestra under the leadership of Professor Zanglein, furnished the musical portion of the program. Mrs. Bachman and Clarence Henry spoke at the morning session and the Jennings orchestra furnished the music.

The institute closed this afternoon. Mrs. Bachman, R. W. Hood, L. B. Clore and Clarence Henry made addresses. The Jennings Sisters played selections.

KEEPING WELL

THE FEET GOD MADE

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

A YOUNG mother recently sent for a doctor in a great hurry. When he came she said, "Doctor, I wish you would look at my baby's feet. They aren't the right shape." He looked at the little pink feet and said, "What's the matter with them?" The mother said, "Why, Doctor, they aren't the same shape as mine at all." "I know they aren't," replied the doctor. "The baby's feet are the shape God made them. Your's are the shape your shoes have made them."

If you want to see a natural foot look at a baby's. It is shaped like a triangle but the broad part is in front. The heel is narrow, the arch is high, the toes are broad and as easily separated as the fingers.

Now compare this with the average adult foot which has been squeezed into fashionable, high-heeled, narrow-pointed shoes for twenty-five or thirty years. It is stiff and rigid compared to the baby's foot. The arch is flat, the toes have been squeezed together for so long that they have lost their power to move independently.

The big toe is bent in, sometimes at so sharp an angle that the joint at the base bears all the pressure of the shoe on that side. This constant irritation has produced an inflamed joint or bunion. The soles of the foot and the insides of the toes have numerous hard patches or calluses due to the constant rubbing of the ill-fitting shoes.

Such feet as those described are not the exception, they are the rule. It is not uncommon to see feet which have all of the deformities mentioned.

The reason is plain. Our hands are free and are better developed in grown people than in children. Our feet are imprisoned at an early age and are forced to grow into unnatural shapes and to become warped, calloused and disfigured. Why? Because every girl and most boys would "rather be dead than wear a shoe that isn't stylish." Women said the same thing about corsets in our grandmother's day. Today, thousands of girls and young women have never had one on. We have more natural waists today than there have been for centuries. Women have learned how much healthier and happier they are with waists as God made them. Let's hope in the next generation they will learn the joy of natural feet and the comfort that comes with freedom from corns, bunions and broken arches.

CONGRESSMEN GET STRANGE REQUESTS

Appeals Often Test the Wit of Legislator.

Washington.—Your congressman's mail, which attains considerable volume during the season, is an odd assortment of letters, containing everything, from facts to fiction, from truth to trouble, from nuggets of suggestion to "nut" requests. If the legislator has a sense of humor he may come to enjoy the latter; the difficulty lies in knowing whether the writer really meant to be funny. Here is a letter that came to a certain legislator:

"I urge that a commission be appointed to go to Germany and lay the matter before the authorities there, pointing out that the surrender of Bergdall by the Germans would aid very materially in smoothing out the feeling engendered by the late war. Upon Germany's surrender of Bergdall to the United States, I would have him shown at theaters in different parts of the country and the proceeds taken in at the door applied to the care and maintenance of some invalid overseas veteran. If such proceedings are contrary to any laws or treaties now existing, would suggest that such treaty action be taken as will make this possible."

Wants Male and Female Fish.

This letter happens to mention the slacker Bergdall, although it might refer to any topic under the sun. One congressman tells of "an old fellow who wrote asking for a male and female fish, so that he could go into the business of raising fish, and he also wanted a law compelling people to eat fish at least once each week." Many a legislator is asked for a lock of the President's hair to be raffled at some entertainment for charity.

"The funniest I've ever had," said this congressman "is from an ardent peace advocate, who wanted us to obtain from the barber of the secretary of state some hair trimmings. In this instance the secretary of state was Hughes, and the trimmings wanted were whiskers."

"I keep in a separate file the letters making odd requests," said another congressman. "Among them is one from a man in my state, although not a resident of my district, informing me that he wanted to come to Washington in order that he might settle a dispute. He was a stakeholder for two of his friends and wanted to know if it were possible for me to obtain him a railway pass, inasmuch as I had been discussing railroad legislation. He paively stated that he had no other reason for coming to Washington, that he was not particularly interested in what congress was doing, but he did want to settle the bet between his friends fairly and without prejudice. The subject of the wager was whether one of the paintings in the rotunda showed an Indian with five or six toes on one of his feet! At first I thought that it was a josh letter, but found out later that the man was regarded as a sort of a Solomon in all disputes in the section in which he lived, and that he had written in good faith.

Answers Them All.

One legislator, instead of paying no attention to peculiar requests, takes pains to answer every one. "I make it a point to answer them because they might not seem as absurd to the writer as they do to me," he explained.

A congressman who has delivered lectures on patent law says that "not a week goes by without requests from inventors. The latest one asked if it is possible to patent a device that will prevent the juice from a grapefruit from squirting on one's shirt front. Since radio has become such a fad I have received more than a hundred letters asking if I could have the Navy department furnish sets free of charge.

"We don't get as many letters as we used to from persons who claim to have solved the problem of perpetual motion, but we have dozens of requests for recipes for home brew.

"About a year ago we received a most peculiar composition. We puzzled over it, then sent it to a decoding expert. He found it contained a request for flower seeds and for the Congressional Record. After we had complied with his request the writer explained that he had written in code to see if his congressman was mentally keen enough to decode it." Now he declares that his congressman is the brightest man in the country.

"Another letter suggested that the money owed to the United States by the allies be used to construct a bridge across the Atlantic ocean."

Washington, Jan. 28.—The U. S. comptroller of the currency's report shows Ohio still in the lead as a building and loan association state. It had, in 1925, 1,000 associations with a total membership of 1,689,686 and total assets of $756,306,091. This was an increase in membership over 1924 of 313,718 members and $117,145,131 in assets. Pennsylvania is shown to have 4,300 associations with 1,600,000 members and assets of $860,000,000.

Gum Was Invaluable to Small Entertainer

Several years ago, when Kenneth Iverson was in one of the first grades, he was asked to speak a piece at a local entertainment. As he was quite shy, at that time, it took considerable coaxing to get him to do it. However, when he mounted the platform, much to his mother's chagrin, he was chewing gum. The audience was convulsed as little Kenneth chewed solemnly between each two verses.

Later in the day his father attempted to scold him for his surprising conduct.

"Why, but, daddy," he explained disarmingly, "I was so scared if it hadn't 'a' been for the gum I never could 'a' done it."—Los Angeles Times.

Gowns and Wraps in Rich Fabrics

Many Sheer Frocks of Crepe-Georgette With Sleeves of Velvet.

Black is worn extensively for afternoon at the smartest rendezvous, advises a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune. It seems that the elegant Parisienne will never quite abandon it, despite all the tenacious attempts to put it out of fashion. The sheer black frocks of crepe georgette with velvet sleeves are legion. The small felt or velvet hats are de rigueur with such afternoon frocks and complete the general harmony of the ensemble. For instance, a coat of black velvet with a fox collar opens over a long tunic frock of biscuit-colored crepe.

For evening wraps it is wise to choose a simple but rather full outline. Metal cloth is very attractive for such wraps, but the modish velours are generally preferred right now. They are exquisitely supple and colorful, these Paradise or Frisson velours, which are used in all shades, black included. But the ruby, jade, bordeaux and emerald shades are favorites. Trimmed with fur—chinchilla, seal or white fox—these capes are made to look still richer by some embroidery in bright colors and metal threads.

The frock with movement is, of course, the great favorite of the hour. It is the frock which, when the wearer is at rest, gives her that famous slender silhouette which she wants to preserve at any price, while it has all the width to animate the silhouette at the slightest pirouette of the owner. The movement can be obtained by inverted folds, by fringes and by transparent tunics, especially lace.

Says Anna Le Vignac, in Le Quotidien of Paris:

"When you look today at the fashion magazines of a year ago, you are surprised how much the modish silhouette has changed since then. Rigorously straight, tight, narrow coats which permit only tiny steps were still the vogue last year; today we wear coats with wide lower edges, with godets and sinuous plaits which undulate at every step.

"It is true that the straight line is not entirely abandoned; sports frocks and tailor makes remain straight, owing to the box-plaits which give them the necessary width; but it is no less true that the winter coats all have a flare and that most of the coats are raglans.

"The cut of our clothes, which was very simple and quite monotonous during the last few years, now has become extremely varied and complicated. The days are gone when you could cut your coat or frock from scant amounts of fabric and often almost without a pattern. If you want to make a coat or frock nowadays you must decide first of all which cut you prefer, then get a good pattern, thereupon find out how wide the fabric has to be and finally buy the material."

Slenderness, Feature of Smartest Fashions

After a season of what seemed to be hopeless effort on the part of designers to oust the straight silhouette from its strong position in fashion, they have succeeded in relegating it to a place of secondary importance, according to a fashion authority.

Slenderness, however, is the basic foundation of the smartest modes, but there are subtle flares, swirling draperies, cleverly disposed fullness and an indefinable tendency toward elaboration that produce an effect vastly different from the fashions of last season.

Fullness is always present whether it appears at the back of the frock, at the sides or in front, and whether it takes the form of plaits, godets, circular flounces or panels cut to suggest the uneven hemline that is an outstanding feature of many of the most interesting new models.

A new development in Paris is the use of two tones of a single shade combined to fashion a frock of compelling interest and charm.

High necklines are another new note which adds to the distinction of present fashions and the very short skirts are given individuality by cleverly arranged flounces or draperies.

Gigolo Crown Promises to Be Spring Favorite

The gigolo crown is predicted for early spring wear. This charming little chapeau is of soft orchid hue, self-trimmed with bands of felt.

REFORMATORY BILL PREPARED AT WASHINGTON

Announcement of Drafting Interesting News Here—May Bridge Scioto River.

The department of justice officials today were busy at Washington preparing a bill for introduction in the house of representatives in a few days that will call for the changing of the temporary jail here for first offenders into a United States reformatory.

The reception of this news has been anticipated here by reformatory men who are watching Washington developments with keen interest.

When the bill is passed and the cogs are all supplied the machinery needed for putting this reservation into shape as a federal reformatory will move swiftly. While work here at the present time is on temporary structures much of it is being done with the idea of some permanency.

Many things must be contemplated. The general plan has been outlined before in this paper in a detailed dispatch from Washington, D. C.

The matter of farming the reservation is a big one and many problems must be solved. For instance, there are about 700 acres of land east of the Scioto river that go to make up a part of the tract transferred to the department of justice.

Since the first bridge, at Bridge street, is about three miles from the reservation means of quicker transportation to the farm on the east side of the river must be provided.

For the present this may be done on barges and ferries. This would work very well during the summer season and when the river was not high. However, eventually, it is believed by observers, that the government will see fit to construct a bridge across the river directly connecting the east and west farms.

That the public is responding to the appeal for books and magazines was demonstrated Wednesday when a large quantity was sent out by the Chamber of Commerce. The books had been donated by citizens. All old books and papers that have been discarded should be turned over to the Chamber of Commerce for this purpose.

As a matter of routine the work on the rehabilitation of the dining hall continues.

Some firms advertise by mailing circulars. Pickaway County has about 5,000 homes. Circulars mailed to each home costs the sender about $150.

Money spent in this manner must be added to the overhead expense and the customer pays that expense.

The Circleville Welding Co.'s policy has always been to reduce expense and give the customer the benefit of the saving. Having been in business for the past six years we need no introduction. All the leading industries of Circleville and the many surrounding towns have their work done here. Why not you. We don't do a cheap job merely to meet competition but do you a real 100 percent job at as a reasonable price as possible.

Welding and brazing is our business, nothing else. Bring your next job here and compare the difference in workmanship.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Bible 400 Years Old

Found in Seminary

Laurens, Pa.—A copy of one of the rarest Bibles in the world—the Ulrich Zwingli Bible—the printing of which is said to have taken four years, has been discovered in the library of the Reformed Theological seminary here.

The Bible, according to its title page, was printed by Christopher Froeschauer in 1529. Four years before that time the first section of the volume, which is in six sections, was printed. The text was compiled by Zwingli and several other preachers of Zurich who were associated with him, and a greater part of the German text was translated from the Latin by Martin Luther. The Bible, according to historians, at the time of its publication corresponded to the popular-priced editions of today.

Boy Uses Dynamite in Game of 10 Pins

San Francisco.—For an hour one morning recently, eleven-year-old John Hickey played a game of 10 pins with 10 sticks of dynamite. The explosive was part of 50 sticks of dynamite stolen by small boys from a construction camp. Policeman Nels Miller, instructed to locate the stolen explosive, found young Hickey playing with the sticks in a lot, promptly halted the game and took the dynamite away from the boy. Other officers recovered more of the stolen dynamite.

HARTMAN THEATER.

Fred Stone, long the best beloved comedian on the American stage in "Stepping Stones" said to be the best show he has ever had, returns to Columbus for his regular triennial engagement on Monday night, February 1, when he opens an engagement of one week at the Hartman theater. The famous entertainer comes here under the management of Charles Dillingham after long engagements in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. The original New York cast and production are promised.

Another member of the Stone family will also make her appearance on this occasion. She is Dorothy, the 18 year old daughter of the famous humorist. She is an accomplished actress, singer and dancer, and above all has the magnetic quality of her father's which reaches across the foot lights and grips the audience. Of this magnetism there are many shades and tones among players. Dorothy's is of the shade and tone of her father's—she convinces her audience that she has an affectionate regard for them, too, exchanging love for love which has been part of the secret of her father's success all these years. Fred Stone has always been on the level with his audiences, giving them the best that is in him and giving it in generous quantity from an overflowing heart. Dorothy possesses this same high sense of duty, of honor and integrity.

The critics of the larger cities have pronounced "Stepping Stones" as of finer quality intrinsically than any of its predecessors. Hitherto the Stone shows—since "The Red Mill" at any rate could be effectively described as "musical comedy." Always they have been superb. Fred Stone's batting average hovers around 100 per cent—but always, too, were they of the grain and texture of "musical comedy." "Stepping Stones" is considerably better and is best described as musical extravaganza. Anne Caldwell wrote the lyrics and with the assistance of R. H. Burnside, the book, while Jerome Kern composed the music. Matinee Wednesday and Saturday. Mail orders now.

REMARKABLE HISTORY OF GEN. J. WARREN KEIFER

Served With Distinction In the Civil and Spanish-American Wars and Received the Surrender of Havana--Was Wounded Four Times--Speaker of National House of Representatives--Celebrates Ninetieth Birthday Anniversary.

Modestly bearing the distinction which has come to him thru the long period of four score years and ten, as a soldier, statesman and an honored citizen of Ohio, the state in which he was born, General J. Warren Keifer, of Springfield, the only surviving major general of Civil war, and the first Ohio man to ever become speaker of the national house of representatives Sunday will celebrate his ninetieth birthday anniversary which occurred Saturday.

Lieutenant Governor Charles H. Lewis will be the principal speaker. Messages from a number of notable persons, including the president and vice president, will be read at the meeting. General Keifer will make a short talk.

Despite the fact that his life has been an active one from the time he engaged in the practice of law at the age of 22, and was severely wounded four times during his more than four years' service in the Civil war, General Keifer, who has served his state and country in various notable ways, is today a well preserved man for one of his years.

Besides the two outstanding marks of distinction set forth, he is a veteran of two wars, having been a major general of volunteers in the Spanish-American war, and is probably one of the oldest if not the oldest living member of the national congress, having the advantage of "Uncle Joe" Cannon of Illinois by a margin of four months, in age.

General Keifer had the distinction of receiving the surrender of Havana, and was the only major general in the Spanish-American war from the north and the only one taken from civil life.

Born with the natural instinct of a soldier, General Keifer was among those Ohioans who offered their services to President Woodrow Wilson when war was declared with Germany. However, he was not called upon to take active part in that historic international conflict.

In his declining years this distinguished Ohioan, unwilling to step aside from an active life of so long standing, has refused to entirely relinquish hold on his chosen profession that of a lawyer. While most of the heavier burdens of the practice of the law firm that he established is carried on by others, he devotes not a little time to the interest of his surviving comrades of the Civil war in pension matters.

General Keifer takes much pride in his sons and grandsons who have become lawyers in his office in which he has been located for a half century. Associated with him in the legal profession are his son, William W. Keifer and Horace Keifer, a grandson, who shares most of the responsibilities of their legal practice. The fact that one son and four grandsons served in the World war is also a great source of pride to the aged general. Another son, Captain Horace C. Keifer, served in the Spanish-American war and died in the Philippines.

The aged soldier-statesman proudly refers to the fact that he was born in Clark county and that Springfield has always been his home. He enlisted from that county, April 19, 1861, in the Third Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Within a few days from the time of his enlistment he was commissioned a major, and the service which he performed during the more than four years of conflict won him one promotion.

grade of major general. He was the youngest officer in the army to hold that rank at the time he was discharged from the service.

General Keifer was first elected to congress in 1877 and at that time served four consecutive terms. He was elected speaker of the 47th congress (1881-83). In 1904 he was returned to congress and served three more consecutive terms. During this latter period Pickaway county was in the Seventh Congressional district and General Keifer was our representative. Until Congressman Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, was elected speaker of the house last December, General Keifer was the only Ohioan to ever hold that exalted position.

It is told of the veteran statesman that when he first became a congressman, he declined to appear in evening clothes. After he was elected speaker he "gave in" and having once broke the ice in this direction he was so favorably impressed with the mode of evening attire for social functions, that he chose to wear that type of clothes much of the time.

Attention given to his diet and taking plenty of exercise are given by General Keifer as being responsible for his long and healthful life. His noon repast frequently consists of a glass of milk and a piece of pie, preferably with fruit in it. For dinner in the evening he rounds out a meal of broader proportions, and makes a practice of retiring early unless he has an evening engagement.

He is unusually tall, possesses a pleasing personality and was always a commanding figure at public gatherings during the many years that he was active in public life. Among some of the outstanding features of his public life was to represent congress at the International Peace conference at Brussels in 1910, before which body he delivered an address, and two years later was made a life member of the Parliamentary Peace conference in Paris.

Having been designated as one of the representatives of the United States at the peace conference scheduled at Stockholm in August, 1914, he was in Berlin at the beginning of the World war, where he heard the declaration of war read in the Reichstag and was an eye witness to the mobilization of the German armies. He also was one of the committee of 40 that issued the call for the third peace conference at The Hague in 1915, which because of the war was never held.

As a member of congress he became interested in the Panama Canal and on two different occasions made trips to the canal zone, the visits of the committees being in connection with work on the canal and in the improvement of the health conditions of the Canal Zone.

Like many who have been born on a farm, it was generally accepted that he would follow in the footsteps of his father in agricultural pursuits. However, injuries suffered when a boy were destined to make this impossible and his educational training was planned with a view to fitting him for the legal profession.

With this in view he was sent to Antioch college, which institution he later served as a member of its board of trustees for a half century. After attending that college he took up the study of law in Springfield, in which city he began the practice of his profession in 1858.

Among other connections of prominence which he bore during his long career, he at one time served as commander of the Ohio Department, Grand Army of the Republic, and was one of the organizers and first commander-in-chief of the Spanish war veterans. He was a member of the Perry Centennial commission, and for 50 years has been identified with the Springfield National bank either as president or vice president, having only recently been reelected to the former office.

Besides his many other qualifications, General Keifer possesses marked literary ability and has written a number of books. Standing out prominently among his literary contributions are his set of two volumes on "Warfare" and his book "Four Years of War," both of which are looked upon as most comprehensive histories of the Civil war period.

General Keifer has always held steadfastly to the principles of the Republican party and his counsel has been sought in political affairs on many occasions both in the state and nation. His first election to the public office was to the upper branch of the Ohio legislature in 1868. He was married to Elizabeth Stout, of Springfield, in 1860, her death having occurred in 1899.

LIABILITY INSURANCE

What It Is and the Benefits That Accrue to the Policy Holders.

I wonder if you realize that every car owner is responsible to the public for the operation of his car, whether he drives it himself or allows others to drive it.

PUBLIC LIABILITY is an insurance term indicating the responsibility the car owner is under for injuries or death inflicted on persons thru the operation of his car.

It is most important of all automobile insurance features, owing to the unknown possibilities of the claims.

Some of the factors making accidents and consequent liability claims daily more numerous, and the owner's risk in operating a car an ever increasing one, are:

CONGESTION OF TRAFFIC. Roads are about the same width as formerly, yet traffic thereon has greatly increased. Between fifteen and twenty million motor vehicles are registered in the United States today. This vast number is being increased daily.

LOW PRICES OF SECOND-HAND CARS have added greatly to the number of irresponsible drivers, who menace all other users of the roads. The careful, sane driver is often the sufferer from the faults of others. IMPROVED HIGHWAYS are a constant temptation to speedsters and encourage less careful attention on the part of all drivers.

THE CHILDREN MUST PLAY, and there being very little yard space around the average city home, the playing is done in the path of the motorists. The heavy tolls of 1924 in life, injuries and property losses have been given wide publicity in the press of the country.

AMBULANCE-CHASING LAWYERS (and there is one or more in every city) make a business of creating cases against any car owner involved in an accident, whether or not it is serious, whether or not he is liable and particularly if he has property.

COURT CHARGES AND ATTORNEY'S FEES MUST BE PAID, and eventually, possibly a heavy judgment to be paid with interest and costs. The feelings, sympathies and judgments of juries are generally in favor of the injured and against the car owner. Verdicts for injuries or death run into thousands of dollars, and are larger than ever before. Even if you win, your expenses mount to a large figure.

An automobile liability guarantees the investigation of claims whether you are liable or not, adjusts, pays, fights your case if necessary, pays expenses, lawyer's fees and court costs, relieves you from responsibility and worry. It does all of this for the owner and for any one legally operating the car with the owner's permission.

If you are now carrying liability insurance, the above facts will serve to strengthen the conviction that led you to protect yourself.

This information, coupled with the fact that last year no fewer than twenty-eight states introduced bills for compulsory liability insurance, is conclusive evidence of the advisability of every car owner relieving himself of personal liability.

Seed Potatoes Need Treating

Farmers Agree That Is Thing to Do, Even With "Certified Spuds."

What is going to be done about treating seed potatoes for the coming season? There is no doubt as to the advisability of using "certified seed." Practically every farmer who has used such seed in the past will agree that it is the thing to do in the future. However we have too many farmers who buy "certified seed"—and do not treat them before planting. Regardless of what kind of seed you buy or where the tubers come from it is well worth the time and money expended to treat before planting. Although the seed are certified, it is still possible that scab, Sclerotium wilt, and powdery scab can come in unnoticed. Seed treatment will control these troubles, says Dr. W. D. Moore, extension plant pathologist at Clemson college, who adds that the control of a small amount of disease now may prevent a large amount of loss in subsequent years.

Corrosive Sublimates.

Use corrosive sublimate for treating your seed. It can be had at any drug store in tablet form, or can be bought in the crystalline form. Make up a 1 to 1,000 (one part corrosive sublimate to 1,000 parts of water) solution, which is equivalent to four ounces of corrosive sublimate to 360 gallons of water. Use wooden barrels or cement tanks for this work. This material is deadly poison, so keep children and all animals away from the solution.

Method Used.—Treat each batch of potatoes for one and one-half hours. The potatoes may be treated in bags or crates. After treating a batch of four bushels, add enough water to the barrel to make up the original volume and then add one-half ounce of corrosive sublimate to keep up the strength. This can be repeated about four times, each time after treating a batch of seed. Because of the dirt that gets into the solution a new barrel should be made up after this. After treatment the potatoes may be dried and stored or else planted immediately.

Ventilating the Potato Cellar During Winter

A warning is sounded by specialists in plant pathology at the Kansas State Agricultural college against the common practice of opening the potato cellar and ventilating it on warm winter days. This is a poor practice and will increase rather than get rid of the moisture in the cellar and on the potatoes, he says. The potatoes sweat and make conditions favorable for rot and decay to set in. Ventilate only when the outside air is near the temperature of the air in the cellar. Stockdyk advises.

Mr. Stockdyk recalls the action of the ice-water pitcher in the summer time. The cold water pitcher condenses the moisture in the warm air and the pitcher "sweats." This, he says, is exactly what happens when the cold potatoes in the cellar come in contact with the warm air being brought in from outside.

Young Unbroken Horses Should Have Training

Young unbroken horses that will be expected to take a full share of farm work next spring should have some training during the winter. At this season of the year there is spare time that can well be used in getting the green young horse accustomed to what is expected of him when he takes a place in the team. It takes time and patience to train a horse to do his job with ease and willingness.

Time spent in properly breaking a young horse means time saved later when farm work is pressing. Furthermore, the young horse that does a little work during the winter will be much better able to work hard next spring because his shoulders and muscles are hardened.

FARM NOTES

Don't scrimp the cures this winter on account of the shortage of roughage.

Do not let the work horses lose weight during idle time in winter, but avoid feeding too heavily.

Animal products are high in protein and must be fed to supplement the grains in an egg producing ration.

If combs are frozen thaw them out with snow or cold water, then apply petroleum grease once a day for several days.

Feed a ration that is adequate as to both nutrient and mineral content, and free from contamination with disease producing germs.

Moistened mash is a good force feed for the pullets. Add just enough water to make it crumble, and feed all they will clean up. Feed it in the morning or at noon.

Every possible effort should be made to prevent birds from catching cold. Running of the nostrils is usually a forerunner to swollen eyes, roup, condition, canker and diphtheria.

TWENTY OHIO FARMERS KEEP COST RECORDS

Twenty Putnam County farmers in the vicinity of Leipsic have begun to keep complete cost-of-production records for three years on their farms. The work is being supervised by the Rural Economics Department of the Ohio Experiment Station. A complete inventory was taken on each farm and the work started January 1.

The records collected from these farms will be tabulated and analyzed by the Experiment Station economists so as to enable the farmer to study his farming operations from a business point of view, and to suggest ways and means of improving them.

The cost of production of the various farm products will be secured both in terms of labor and material required and in terms of dollars and cents. It is believed the results will be of great value not only to the farmers co-operating but to others as well.

E. C. Newcomer has been selected by the department as route-man to collect the records and help the farmers in securing accurate data. He will be located at Leipsic and visit the farms each week. The banks of Leipsic are also co-operating in the work.

These are typical farms, ranging in size from 62 to 290 acres, with an average of 125 acres. The type of agriculture varies. On some of the farms a large portion of the income is from the sale of grain, others from beef or dairy cattle, and still others from hogs.

The farms are mostly family farms, with a few having hired labor for the year. Eight of the farmers own tractors.

Nothing Goes to Waste

Dried rabbit skins are used for the manufacture of felt hats. No part of the skin is wasted—the fur goes to hat factories, while the skins, reduced to shreds by the fur-clipping process, are made into glue, and the overhairs and waste under are disposed of to manufacturers of fertilizer.

Early Lighthouse

The first lighthouse built by the United States as an independent government is at Cape Henry, at the entrance of Chesapeake bay. It was finished in 1792, when fish oil was used for lighting, sperm oil being substituted in 1810.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

Washington, Jan. 28.—(UP.)

Senate debate on the $352,661,000 federal tax reduction bill was opened today by Chairman Smoot of the finance committee with the demand that the measure be passed by Feb. 10.

"Immediate consideration and speedy disposition" was asked by the Utah senator and administration financial expert, who spoke at length giving reasons for his committee's action in revising the measure passed by the house which provided only $330,000,000 reduction.

Lowering of surtax rates on incomes from a maximum of 40 to 20 per cent was defended by Smoot as sound economics.

Repeal of the publicity of the income tax was advocated by Smoot because no "useful purpose" has been served by publication.

He also defended the committee's action in repealing the inheritance tax with the house bill retained in part, restoring the tax on legitimate drama, musical concerts and grand operas which the house had eliminated, increasing personal exemptions and refusing to abolish entirely the excise tax on automobiles, trucks and alcohol.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today suspended until May 28, pending investigation, the operation of rate schedules to increase rate on cotton for export moving from New Mexico on the Santa Fe to New Orleans.

A final conference between Senator Hiram Johnson and Rep. Swing, Republicans, California, and other interested parties was held today in an effort to revise the Johnson-Swing Boulder Canyon Dam bill along lines suggested by Secretary of the Interior Work. The bill is expected to be completed this afternoon and submitted to Work. If he approves it, hearings will begin before the House Irrigation Committee tomorrow.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Montana, Democrat, announced today he would present a report to the Senate judiciary committee on Monday on the committee's inquiry into whether the justice department has exercised due diligence in investigating the Aluminum Company of America, controlled by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. The report is understood to criticize the department and suggest a more complete investigation of the case by the Senate.

Boy Walks 25 Miles to School; Pays With Bull

Oneida, Ky.—J. K. Burns and a few associates founded an institute here a few years ago, where educational opportunities were few.

When the school opened this fall, Burns says, a boy walked from Leslie county, 25 miles away, leading a two-year-old bull, which was all he had to pay his tuition and other expenses. The institute accepted him.

Later a six-year-old girl rode a mule from her home in the same county 42 miles from the school. She had nothing to offer as payment for her schooling except the promise of a pig that would be given to the institute.

A fourteen-year-old girl walked six miles to the school, where she explained that her father did not believe in education, but she wanted to learn to be a teacher.

CROCKEYJOY ADVENTURES

By BETTY BROWNE

(Copyright)

The Transformation of Purz

RUTH had been doing some sewing for her new doll. The twilight had crept into the room unnoticed by her, till now it was almost dark. She had a feeling, somehow, that she wasn't alone. It frightened her a little, and so she snapped the button which turned on the electric lights. As the lights flashed, she thought she heard an exclamation of surprise from someone.

Sure enough, a moment later she saw her friend, the kindly old Crockeyjoy, come sliding down the wire of the table lamp. Hand over hand he came, very much like the trapeze men in the circus. It was only a moment till he stood on the table facing Ruth. He blew on his hands to warm them. For it was chilly in the room. Each time he puffed, he swelled up his cheeks, and his long gray beard waggled to and fro in a very ludicrous way. Ruth could scarcely keep from laughing outright at him.

"It is too cold here for us to be comfortable," he said after a time. "I think I'll fix it so that you can come and see me and my people whenever you want to. How would you like that?" he added.

"It is the very thing for which I've been wishing," replied Ruth. "But how can you manage it?"

The kindly old Crockeyjoy pushed his sugar-loaf hat to one side and scratched his head in a thoughtful way. He whistled a bit of dance tune and walked back and forth on the table top. Then he slapped his hand on his knee and gave a long, good-natured chuckle.

"The cat with jeweled eyes will be the very one to do it. Bring him here to me." And Ruth went at once across the room and brought back to the table the little silver cat with jewels for eyes which one of her friends had given her as a birthday present. Then the odd fellow rubbed it in a certain way, directly back of the left eye and in front of the left ear; and, would you believe it, that silver cat just began to purr, and to arch up his back, and act like he had always been alive.

"Now get that old picture album, the one with the painting of the old castle on the back side of it, and we'll make a road for you to use whenever you will," said the Crockeyjoy. So Ruth picked up the book from the corner and brought it also to the table top. At a word from the odd fellow, she opened the book. In the back of it was a picture which she had never noticed before. A great, dun-colored tower was shown. All of the windows were heavily barred, but there seemed to be a dim, friendly sort of light shining from in back of them somewhere. Before the castle was a drawbridge and ringed around it was a wide, deep moat. It looked a place to strike fear to the heart of any enemy and perhaps bring joy to the heart of any friend who deigned to enter it. Mystery and adventure lurked all about it. The sight of it, and the thought of what it might hold, made Ruth's heart beat a trifle faster.

"Come," said the Crockeyjoy, "today I have but time to lead you to the castle door. And that must be done at once, if at all. Come."

Suddenly Ruth found that she had shrunk to the smallness of Purz and the Crockeyjoy. She took the Crockeyjoy's hand in one of hers, and slipped the other into the furry paw of Purz. Then—straight down the broad road, and into the book, the three of them went. When they reached the drawbridge, the Crockeyjoy told Purz just how to signal the keeper so that the bridge would be lowered for him. By that time they had to return, for it was very near the supper hour.

They hastened out of the book just as Ruth's mother called from the dining-room for her to get ready for supper. "From now on, Purz can always bring you to the castle which is the front door of Crockeyland. I'll expect to see you soon," and with those words the Crockeyjoy climbed back up the light cord and vanished into the shadows.

Ruth told herself that she would visit the Land of Crockey as soon as ever she could. And she did. And among her adventures there were some very amazing things, which you shall hear of later on.

SQUIBBS AND DRIBS.

Western farmers have a surplus supply of corn and oats that they don't know what to do with. If they will write us, we will give them some confidential information about the corn, but, as for the oats, we haven't heard of any drink that can be made from them.

The River Seine has risen so high during the recent floods that have been occurring in France, that it is reported the French people are seriously considering taking up the matter of drinking water to remove the menace.

One cause of the shortage of rubber and the consequent high prices can be laid at the feet of the women—their goloshes require as much rubber as four balloon tires.

The ex-King of Greece is reported to be coming to Florida to live. With his former experience he ought to be equipped to start a title company.

All of the prohibition enforcement officers have been finger printed. This is usually done only when a man is convicted of a crime, but maybe it is just as well to take time by the forelock.

This Little Pig Went To Market

Thus goes an old familiar nursery rhyme. All of you know it, so we will not repeat it. Now, we do not mean to infer that we are "little pigs," but we just want to tell you that

WE, TOO, WENT TO MARKET

Friday, January 15th, we arrived in Grand Rapids, the Furniture Capital of America, with the thought of learning all we could relative to the newest patterns of furniture for this year. We also decided that we would learn all we could about the proper manner of construction of good furniture.

WE SAW MILES AND MILES

of beautiful furniture. And, folks, how we would have enjoyed taking you along with us. But, as that was impossible, we decided to do the next best thing, and so we ordered part of it shipped down here for the use of the folks about Circleville.

AN INTENSIVE COURSE IN FURNITURE MERCHANDISING

was given to those attending the market, and we took advantage of it. For five days, we attended this "school." And now, after our visit to the market, and after taking this training, we do feel that we are better fitted to render you more efficient service in your furniture buying. Bring your problems to us and we will try to solve them for you. At least, drop in and let us tell you more of what we saw and heard while

From the viewpoint of Colonel Mitchell and his friends in and out of congress, however, the resignation is merely a stepping stone from a restricted activity to complete freedom that civilians enjoy but which army officers are denied by service regulations and traditions. It is an open secret that Mitchell intends to take advantage of that freedom, immediately his resignation is effective, by resuming with redoubled vigor his attacks upon the air policies of the war and navy departments, which led to his trial and conviction.

Boy Chats With Surgeon After His Leg Is Cut Off

Nyack, N. Y.—Emil Strittmater, eleven-year-old boy who chatted with a surgeon treating his left leg which had been cut off below the knee while the boy was trying to leap aboard a moving freight train, was said to be convalescing rapidly in Nyack hospital.

After the accident the boy told his companions to call a doctor and without any outcries awaited his arrival. Nurses said he was absorbed only in his toys and was a model patient.

Illiterate Mayors

At government offices in Paris which have to deal with local administrative affairs, it is not unusual to find official documents on which space for the mayor's signature is filled by a cross with the regulation phrase: "States he cannot write."

FORD STOCK MAY BE SOLD TO EMPLOYEES

The Ford Motor Co., has announced that profit sharing certificates will be available to employees February 1. Issuance of the certificates was temporarily discontinued last April 1, when a $25,000,000 quota was reached.

The plan under which employees received each six months a share of Ford company profits originated in January, 1920. Each employee is permitted to deposit from his pay check an amount not to exceed one-fourth of his total pay. Formerly the limit was one-third. When $100 is accrued the employee is given a certificate guaranteeing the holder 6 per cent on his investment.

MEETINGS AT MEMORIAL HALL DREW CROWDS

Farmers Were Entertained With Addresses and Music --Hugh Diamond on Hand.

All roads led to the Memorial hall Friday. The farmers came into the city early to attend the morning session of the institute which opened at 9:30 o'clock.

The address of welcome was made by John D. Hummel, who is a past master in this welcoming game. His address was well received and he was roundly applauded. The invocation was given by Rev. G. J. Troutman. The address of Mrs. Dora Sandoe Bachman, a Columbus lawyer and educator whose subject "What Does Rural Life Mean to You," was most interesting. Clarence Henry, a farmer of Hebron, spoke on the subject "The Brood Sow and Her Litters" and this was most instructive. The vocal solos given by Miss Helen Marion and John Gallaher, with Miss Abbe Mills Clarke as accompanist, were very pleasing.

The afternoon and evening sessions were well attended. The principal drawing card was the Scotchman, Hugh Diamond, the Galion humorist. In the evening Mr. Diamond brought along his "fiddle" and rendered some old home-like tunes. Mr. Diamond said he couldn't see why Henry did not call for him to do some fiddling to broadcast.

Mrs. Bachman and Russell G. East also spoke and "Bob" Brehmer, of the Ford company, told the audience "What We Are Doing in Circleville" and he told them something, he always does.

The High School orchestra under the leadership of Professor Zanglein, furnished the musical portion of the program. Mrs. Bachman and Clarence Henry spoke at the morning session and the Jennings orchestra furnished the music.

The institute closed this afternoon. Mrs. Bachman, R. W. Hood, L. B. Clore and Clarence Henry made addresses. The Jennings Sisters played selections.

KEEPING WELL

THE FEET
GOD MADE

DR. FREDERICK B. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

A YOUNG mother recently sent for a doctor in a great hurry. When he came she said, "Doctor, I wish you would look at my baby's feet. They aren't the right shape." He looked at the little pink feet and said, "What's the matter with them?" The mother said, "Why, Doctor, they aren't the same shape as mine at all." "I know they aren't," replied the doctor. "The baby's feet are the shape God made them. Your's are the shape your shoes have made them."

If you want to see a natural foot look at a baby's. It is shaped like a triangle but the broad part is in front. The heel is narrow, the arch is high, the toes are broad and as easily separated as the fingers.

Now compare this with the average adult foot which has been squeezed into fashionable, high-heeled, narrow-pointed shoes for twenty-five or thirty years. It is stiff and rigid compared to the baby's foot. The arch is flat, the toes have been squeezed together for so long that they have lost their power to move independently.

The big toe is bent in, sometimes at so sharp an angle that the joint at the base bears all the pressure of the shoe on that side. This constant irritation has produced an inflamed joint or bunion. The soles of the foot and the insides of the toes have numerous hard patches or calluses due to the constant rubbing of the ill-fitting shoes.

Such feet as those described are not the exception, they are the rule. It is not uncommon to see feet which have all of the deformities mentioned. The reason is plain. Our hands are free and are better developed in grown people than in children. Our feet are imprisoned at an early age and are forced to grow into unnatural shapes and to become warped, calloused and disfigured. Why? Because every girl and most boys would "rather be dead than wear a shoe that isn't stylish." Women said the same thing about corsets in our grandmother's day. Today, thousands of girls and young women have never had one on. We have more natural waists today than there have been for centuries. Women have learned how much healthier and happier they are with waists as God made them. Let's hope in the next generation they will learn the joy of natural feet and the comfort that comes with freedom from corns, bunions and broken arches.

CONGRESSMEN GET STRANGE REQUESTS

Appeals Often Test the Wit of Legislator.

Washington. — Your congressman's mail, which attains considerable volume during the season, is an odd assortment of letters, containing everything, from facts to fiction, from truth to trouble, from nuggets of suggestion to "nut" requests. If the legislator has a sense of humor he may come to enjoy the latter; the difficulty lies in knowing whether the writer really meant to be funny. Here is a letter that came to a certain legislator:

"I urge that a commission be appointed to go to Germany and lay the matter before the authorities there, pointing out that the surrender of Bergdoll by the Germans would aid very materially in smoothing out the feeling engendered by the late war. Upon Germany's surrender of Bergdoll to the United States, I would have him shown at theaters in different parts of the country and the proceeds taken in at the door applied to the care and maintenance of some invalid overseas veteran. If such proceedings are contrary to any laws or treaties now existing, would suggest that such treaty action be taken as will make this possible."

Wants Male and Female Fish.

This letter happens to mention the slacker Bergdoll, although it might refer to any topic under the sun. One congressman tells of "an old fellow who wrote asking for a male and female fish, so that he could go into the business of raising fish, and he also wanted a law compelling people to eat fish at least once each week." Many a legislator is asked for a lock of the President's hair to be raffled at some entertainment for charity.

"The funniest I've ever had," said this congressman "is from an ardent peace advocate, who wanted us to obtain from the barber of the secretary of state some hair trimmings. In this instance the secretary of state was Hughes, and the trimmings wanted were whiskers."

"I keep in a separate file the letters making odd requests," said another congressman. "Among them is one from a man in my state, although not a resident of my district, informing me that he wanted to come to Washington in order that he might settle a dispute. He was a stakeholder for two of his friends and wanted to know if it were possible for me to obtain him a railway pass, inasmuch as I had been discussing railroad legislation. He naively stated that he had no other reason for coming to Washington, that he was not particularly interested in what congress was doing, but he did want to settle the bet between his friends fairly and without prejudice. The subject of the wager was whether one of the paintings in the rotunda showed an Indian with five or six toes on one of his feet! At first I thought that it was a josh letter, but found out later that the man was regarded as a sort of a Solomon in all disputes in the section in which he lived, and that he had written in good faith.

Answers Them All.

One legislator, instead of paying no attention to peculiar requests, takes pains to answer every one. "I make it a point to answer them because they might not seem as absurd to the writer as they do to me," he explained.

A congressman who has delivered lectures on patent law says that "not a week goes by without requests from inventors. The latest one asked if it is possible to patent a device that will prevent the juice from a grapefruit from squirting on one's shirt front. Since radio has become such a fad I have received more than a hundred letters asking if I could have the Navy department furnish sets free of charge.

"We don't get as many letters as we used to from persons who claim to have solved the problem of perpetual motion, but we have dozens of requests for recipes for home brew.

"About a year ago we received a most peculiar composition. We puzzled over it, then sent it to a decoding expert. He found it contained a request for flower seeds and for the Congressional Record. After we had complied with his request the writer explained that he had written in code 'to see if his congressman was mentally keen enough to decode it.' Now he declares that his congressman is the brightest man in the country.

"Another letter suggested that the money owed to the United States by the allies be used to construct a bridge across the Atlantic ocean."

Gum Was Invaluable to Small Entertainer

Several years ago, when Kenneth Iverson was in one of the first grades, he was asked to speak a piece at a local entertainment. As he was quite shy, at that time, it took considerable coaxing to get him to do it. However, when he mounted the platform, much to his mother's chagrin, he was chewing gum. The audience was convulsed as little Kenneth chewed solemnly between each two verses.

Later in the day his father attempted to scold him for his surprising conduct.

"Why, but, daddy," he explained disarmingly, "I was so scared if it hadn't 'a' been for the gum I never could 'a' done it."—Los Angeles Times.

Gowns and Wraps
in Rich Fabrics

Many Sheer Frocks of Crepe-Georgette With Sleeves of Velvet.

Black is worn extensively for afternoon at the smartest rendezvous, advises a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune. It seems that the elegant Parisienne will never quite abandon it, despite all the tenuous attempts to put it out of fashion. The sheer black frocks of crepe georgette with velvet sleeves are legion. The small felt or velvet hats are de rigueur with such afternoon frocks and complete the general harmony of the ensemble. For instance, a coat of black velvet with a fox collar opens over a long tulle frock of biscuit-colored crepe.

For evening wraps it is wise to choose a simple but rather full outline. Metal cloth is very attractive for such wraps, but the modish velours are generally preferred right now. They are exquisitely supple and colorful, these Paradise or Frisson velvets, which are used in all shades, black included. But the ruby, jade, bordeaux and emerald shades are favorites. Trimmed with fur—chinchilla, seal or white fox—these capes are made to look still richer by some embroidery in bright colors and metal threads.

The frock with movement is, of course, the great favorite of the hour. It is the frock which, when the wearer is at rest, gives her that famous slender silhouette which she wants to preserve at any price, while it has all the width to animate the silhouette at the slightest pirouette of the owner. The movement can be obtained by inverted folds, by fringes and by transparent tunics, especially lace.

Says Anna Le Vignac, in Le Quotidien of Paris:

"When you look today at the fashion magazines of a year ago, you are surprised how much the modish silhouette has changed since then. Rigorously straight, tight, narrow coats which permit only tiny steps were still the vogue last year; today we wear coats with wide lower edges, with godets and sinuous plaits which undulate at every step.

"It is true that the straight line is not entirely abandoned; sports frocks and tailor makes remain straight, owing to the box-plaits which give them the necessary width; but it is no less true that the winter coats all have a flare and that most of the coats are raglans.

"The cut of our clothes, which was very simple and quite monotonous during the last few years, now has become extremely varied and complicated. The days are gone when you could cut your coat or frock from scant amounts of fabric and often almost without a pattern. If you want to make a coat or frock nowadays you must decide first of all which cut you prefer, then get a good pattern, thereupon find out how wide the fabric has to be and finally buy the material."

Slenderness, Feature of Smartest Fashions

After a season of what seemed to be hopeless effort on the part of designers to oust the straight silhouette from its strong position in fashion, they have succeeded in relegating it to a place of secondary importance, according to a fashion authority.

Slenderness, however, is the basic foundation of the smartest modes, but there are subtle flares, swirling draperies, cleverly disposed fullness and an indefinable tendency toward elaboration that produce an effect vastly different from the fashions of last season.

Fullness is always present whether it appears at the back of the frock, at the sides or in front, and whether it takes the form of plaits, godets, circular flounces or panels cut to suggest the uneven hemline that is an outstanding feature of many of the most interesting new models.

A new development in Paris is the use of two tones of a single shade combined to fashion a frock of compelling interest and charm.

High necklines are another new note which adds to the distinction of present fashions and the very short skirts are given individuality by cleverly arranged flounces or draperies.

REFORMATORY
BILL PREPARED
AT WASHINGTON

Announcement of Drafting May-Ending News Here—May Bridge Scioto River.

The department of justice officials today were busy at Washington preparing a bill for introduction in the house of representatives in a few days that will call for the changing of the temporary jail here for first offenders into a United States reformatory.

The reception of this news has been anticipated here by reformatory men who are watching Washington developments with keen interest.

When the bill is passed and the cogs are all supplied the machinery needed for putting this reservation into shape as a federal reformatory will move swiftly. While work here at the present time is on temporary structures much of it is being done with the idea of some permanency.

Many things must be contemplated. The general plan has been outlined before in this paper in a detailed dispatch from Washington, D. C.

The matter of farming the reservation is a big one and many problems must be solved. For instance, there are about 700 acres of land east of the Scioto river that go to make up a part of the tract transferred to the department of justice.

Since the first bridge, at Bridge street, is about three miles from the reservation means of quicker transportation to the farm on the east side of the river must be provided.

For the present this may be done on barges and ferries. This would work very well during the summer season and when the river was not high. However, eventually, it is believed by observers, that the government will see fit to construct a bridge across the river directly connecting the east and west farms.

That the public is responding to the appeal for books and magazines was demonstrated Wednesday when a large quantity was sent out by the Chamber of Commerce. The books had been donated by citizens. All old books and papers that have been discarded should be turned over to the Chamber of Commerce for this purpose.

As a matter of routine the work on the rehabilitation of the dining hall continues.

Among the speakers at the convention were Cyrus Locher, state director of commerce, and Leon Henderson, New York, associate director of the Russell Sage Foundation.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. Bible 400 Years Old Found in Seminary

Laurens, Pa.—A copy of one of the rarest Bibles in the world—the Ulrich Zwingli Bible—the printing of which is said to have taken four years, has been discovered in the library of the Reformed Theological seminary here.

The Bible, according to its title page, was printed by Christopher Froschauer in 1529. Four years before that time the first section of the volume, which is in six sections, was printed. The text was compiled by Zwingli and several other preachers of Zurich who were associated with him, and a greater part of the German text was translated from the Latin by Martin Luther. The Bible, according to historians, at the time of its publication corresponded to the popular-priced editions of today.

Boy Uses Dynamite in Game of 10 Pins

San Francisco.—For an hour one morning recently, eleven-year-old John Hickey played a game of 10 pins with 10 sticks of dynamite. The explosive was part of 50 sticks of dynamite stolen by small boys from a construction camp. Policeman Nels Miller, instructed to locate the stolen explosive, found young Hickey playing with the sticks in a lot, promptly halted the game and took the dynamite away from the boy. Other officers recovered more of the stolen dynamite.

Fred Stone, long the best beloved comedian on the American stage in "Stepping Stones" said to be the best show he has ever had, returns to Columbus for his regular triennial engagement on Monday night, February 1, when he opens an engagement of one week at the Hartman theater. The famous entertainer comes here under the management of Charles Dillingham after long engagements in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. The original New York cast and production are promised.

Another member of the Stone family will also make her appearance on this occasion. She is Dorothy, the 18 year old daughter of the famous fun-maker. She is an accomplished actress, singer and dancer, and above all has the magnetic quality of her father's which reaches across the foot lights and grips the audience. Of this magnetism there are many shades and tones among players. Dorothy's is of the shade and tone of her father's—she convinces her audience that she has an affectionate regard for them, too, exchanging love for love which has been part of the secret of her father's success all these years. Fred Stone has always been on the level with his audiences, giving them the best that is in him and giving it in generous quantity from an overflowing heart. Dorothy possesses this same high sense of duty, of honor and integrity.

The critics of the larger cities have pronounced "Stepping Stones" as of finer quality intrinsically than any of its predecessors. Hitherto the Stone shows—since "The Red Mill" at any rate could be effectively described as "musical comedy." Always they have been superb. Fred Stone's batting average hovers around 100 per cent—but always, too, were they of the grain and texture of "musical comedy." "Stepping Stones" is considerably better and is best described as musical extravaganza. Anne Caldwell wrote the lyrics and with the assistance of R. H. Burnside, the book, while Jerome Kern composed the music. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Mail orders now.

REMARKABLE HISTORY OF GEN. J. WARREN KEIFER

Served With Distinction In the Civil and Spanish-American Wars and Received the Surrender of Havana--Was Wounded Four Times—Speaker of National House of Representatives--Celebrates Ninetieth Birthday Anniversary.

Modestly bearing the distinction which has come to him thru the long period of four score years and ten, as a soldier, statesman and an honored citizen of Ohio, the state in which he was born, General J. Warren Keifer, of Springfield, the only surviving major general of Civil war, and the first Ohio man to ever become speaker of the national house of representatives Sunday will celebrate his ninetieth birthday anniversary which occurred Saturday.

Lieutenant Governor Charles H. Lewis will be the principal speaker. Messages from a number of notable persons, including the president and vice president, will be read at the meeting. General Keifer will make a short talk.

Despite the fact that his life has been an active one from the time he engaged in the practice of law at the age of 22, and was severely wounded four times during his more than four years' service in the Civil war, General Keifer, who has served his state and country in various notable ways, is today a well preserved man for one of his years.

Besides the two outstanding marks of distinction set forth, he is a veteran of two wars, having been a major general of volunteers in the Spanish-American war, and is probably one of the oldest if not the oldest living member of the national congress, having the advantage of "Uncle Joe" Cannon of Illinois by a margin of four months, in age.

General Keifer had the distinction of receiving the surrender of Havana, and was the only major general in the Spanish-American war from the north and the only one taken from civil life.

Born with the natural instinct of a soldier, General Keifer was among those Ohioans who offered their services to President Woodrow Wilson when war was declared with Germany. However, he was not called upon to take active part in that historic international conflict.

In his declining years this distinguished Ohioan, unwilling to step aside from an active life of so long standing, has refused to entirely relinquish hold on his chosen profession that of a lawyer. While most of the heavier burdens of the practice of the law firm that he established is carried on by others, he devotes not a little time to the interest of his surviving comrades of the Civil war in pension matters.

General Keifer takes much pride in his sons and grandsons who have become lawyers in his office in which he has been located for a half century. Associated with him in the legal profession are his son, William W. Keifer and Horace Keifer, a grandson, who shares most of the responsibilities of their legal practice. The fact that one son and four grandsons served in the World war is also a great source of pride to the aged general. Another son, Captain Horace C. Keifer, served in the Spanish-American war and died in the Philippines.

The aged soldier-statesman proudly refers to the fact that he was born in Clark county and that Springfield has always been his home. He enlisted from that county, April 19, 1861, in the Third Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Within a few days from the time of his enlistment he was commissioned a major, and the service which he performed during the more than four years of conflict won him one promotion after another until he reached the grade of major general. He was the youngest officer in the army to hold that rank at the time he was discharged from the service.

General Keifer was first elected to congress in 1877 and at that time served four consecutive terms. He was elected speaker of the 47th congress (1881-83). In 1904 he was returned to congress and served three more consecutive terms. During this latter period Pickaway county was in the Seventh Congressional district and General Keifer was our representative. Until Congressman Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, was elected speaker of the house last December, General Keifer was the only Ohioan to ever hold that exalted position.

It is told of the veteran statesman that when he first became a congressman, he declined to appear in evening clothes. After he was elected speaker he "gave in" and having once broke the ice in this direction he was so favorably impressed with the mode of evening attire for social functions, that he chose to wear that type of clothes much of the time.

Attention given to his diet and taking plenty of exercise are given by General Keifer as being responsible for his long and healthful life. His noon repast frequently consists of a glass of milk and a piece of pie, preferably with fruit in it. For dinner in the evening he rounds out a meal of broader proportions, and makes a practice of retiring early unless he has an evening engagement.

He is unusually tall, possesses a pleasing personality and was always a commanding figure at public gatherings during the many years that he was active in public life. Among some of the outstanding features of his public life was to represent congress at the International Peace conference at Brussels in 1910, before which body he delivered an address, and two years later was made a life member of the Parliamentary Peace conference in Paris.

Having been designated as one of the representatives of the United States at the peace conference scheduled at Stockholm in August, 1914, he was in Berlin at the beginning of the World war, where he heard the declaration of war read in the Reichstag and was an eye witness to the mobilization of the German armies. He also was one of the committee of 40 that issued the call for the third peace conference at The Hague in 1915, which because of the war was never held.

As a member of congress he became interested in the Panama Canal and on two different occasions made trips to the canal zone, the visits of the committees being in connection with work on the canal and in the improvement of the health conditions of the Canal Zone.

Like many who have been born on a farm, it was generally accepted that he would follow in the footsteps of his father in agricultural pursuits. However, injuries suffered when a boy were destined to make this impossible and his educational training was planned with a view to fitting him for the legal profession.

With this in view he was sent to Antioch college, which institution he later served as a member of its board of trustees for a half century. After attending that college he took up the study of law in Springfield, in which city he began the practice of his profession in 1858.

Among other connections of prominence which he bore during his long career, he at one time served as commander of the Ohio Department, Grand Army of the Republic, and was one of the organizers and first commander-in-chief of the Spanish war veterans. He was a member of the Perry Centennial commission, and for 50 years has been identified with the Springfield National bank either as president or vice president, having only recently been reelected to the former office.

Besides his many other qualifications, General Keifer possesses marked literary ability and has written a number of books. Standing out prominently among his literary contributions are his set of two volumes on "Slavery" and his book, "Four Years of War," both of which are looked upon as most comprehensive histories of the Civil war period.

General Keifer has always held steadfastly to the principles of the Republican party and his counsel has been sought in political affairs on many occasions both in the state and nation. His first election to the public office was to the upper branch of the Ohio legislature in 1868. He was married to Elizabeth Stout, of Springfield, in 1860, her death having occurred in 1899.

LIABILITY INSURANCE

What It Is and the Benefits That Accrue to the Policy Holders.

I wonder if you realize that every car owner is responsible to the public for the operation of his car, whether he drives it himself or allows others to drive it.

PUBLIC LIABILITY is an insurance term indicating the responsibility the car owner is under for injuries or death inflicted on persons thru the operation of his car.

It is most important of all automobile insurance features, owing to the unknown possibilities of the claims.

Some of the factors making accidents and consequent liability claims daily more numerous, and the owner's risk in operating a car an ever increasing one, are:

CONGESTION OF TRAFFIC. Roads are about the same width as formerly, yet traffic thereon has greatly increased. Between fifteen and twenty million motor vehicles are registered in the United States today. This vast number is being increased daily.

LOW PRICES OF SECOND-HAND CARS have added greatly to the number of irresponsible drivers, who menace all other users of the roads. The careful, sane driver is often the sufferer from the faults of others. IMPROVED HIGHWAYS are a constant temptation to speedsters and encourage less careful attention on the part of all drivers.

THE CHILDREN MUST PLAY, and there being very little yard space around the average city home, the playing is done in the path of the motorists. The heavy tolls of 1924 in life, injuries and property losses have been given wide publicity in the press of the country.

AMBULANCE-CHASING LAWYERS (and there is one or more in every city) make a business of creating cases against any car owner involved in an accident, whether or not it is serious, whether or not he is liable and particularly if he has property.

COURT CHARGES AND ATTORNEY'S FEES MUST BE PAID, and eventually, possibly a heavy judgment to be paid with interest and costs. The feelings, sympathies and judgments of juries are generally in favor of the injured and against the car owner. Verdicts for injuries or death run into thousands of dollars, and are larger than ever before. Even if you win, your expenses mount to a large figure.

An automobile liability guarantees the investigation of claims whether you are liable or not, adjusts, pays, fights your case if necessary, pays expenses, lawyer's fees and court costs, relieves you from responsibility and worry. It does all of this for the owner and for any one legally operating the car with the owner's permission.

If you are now carrying liability insurance, the above facts will serve to strengthen the conviction that led you to protect yourself.

This information, coupled with the fact that last year no fewer than twenty-eight states introduced bills for compulsory liability insurance, is conclusive evidence of the advisability of every car owner relieving himself of personal liability.

Seed Potatoes Need Treating

Farmers Agree That Is Thing to Do, Even With "Certified Spuds."

What is going to be done about treating seed potatoes for the coming season? There is no doubt as to the advisability of using "certified seed." Practically every farmer who has used such seed in the past will agree that it is the thing to do in the future. However we have too many farmers who buy "certified seed"—and do not treat them before planting. Regardless of what kind of seed you buy or where the tubers come from it is well worth the time and money expended to treat before planting. Although the seed are certified, it is still possible that scab, Sclerotium wilt, and powdery scab can come in unnoticed. Seed treatment will control these troubles, says Dr. W. D. Moore, extension plant pathologist at Clemson college, who adds that the control of a small amount of disease now may prevent a large amount of loss in subsequent years.

Corrosive Sublimates. Use corrosive sublimate for treating your seed. It can be had at any drug store in tablet form, or can be bought in the crystalline form. Make up a 1 to 1,000 (one part corrosive sublimate to 1,000 parts of water) solution, which is equivalent to four ounces of corrosive sublimate to 30 gallons of water. Use wooden barrels or cement tanks for this work. This material is deadly poison, so keep children and all animals away from the solution.

Method Used.—Treat each batch of potatoes for one and one-half hours. The potatoes may be treated in bags or crates. After treating a batch of four bushels, add enough water to the barrel to make up the original volume and then add one-half ounce of corrosive sublimate to keep up the strength. This can be repeated about four times, each time after treating a batch of seed. Because of the dirt that gets into the solution a new barrel should be made up after this. After treatment the potatoes may be dried and stored or else planted immediately.

Ventilating the Potato Cellar During Winter

A warning is sounded by specialists in plant pathology at the Kansas State Agricultural college against the common practice of opening the potato cellar and ventilating it on warm winter days. This is a poor practice and will increase rather than get rid of the moisture in the cellar and on the potatoes, he says. The potatoes sweat and make conditions favorable for rot and decay to set in. Ventilate only when the outside air is near the temperature of the air in the cellar. Stockdyk advises.

Mr. Stockdyk recalls the action of the ice-water pitcher in the summer time. The cold water pitcher condenses the moisture in the warm air and the pitcher "sweats." This, he says, is exactly what happens when the cold potatoes in the cellar come in contact with the warm air being brought in from outside.

Young Unbroken Horses Should Have Training

Young unbroken horses that will be expected to take a full share of farm work next spring should have some training during the winter. At this season of the year there is spare time that can well be used in getting the green young horse accustomed to what is expected of him when he takes a place in the team. It takes time and patience to train a horse to do his job with ease and willingness.

Time spent in properly breaking a young horse means time saved later when farm work is pressing. Furthermore, the young horse that does a little work during the winter will be much better able to work hard next spring because his shoulders and muscles are hardened.

FARM NOTES

Don't scrimp the ewes this winter on account of the shortage of roughage.

Do not let the work horses lose weight during idle time in winter, but avoid feeding too heavily.

Animal products are high in protein and must be fed to supplement the grains in an egg producing ration.

If combs are frozen thaw them out with snow or cold water, then apply petroleum grease once a day for several days.

Feed a ration that is adequate as to both nutrient and mineral content, and free from contamination with disease-producing germs.

Moistened mash is a good force feed for the pullets. Add just enough water to make it crumble, and feed all they will clean up. Feed it in the morning or at noon.

Every possible effort should be made to prevent birds from catching cold. Running of the nostrils is usually a forerunner to swollen eyes, rough condition, cancer and diphtheria.

TWENTY OHIO FARMERS KEEP COST RECORDS

Twenty Putnam County farmers in the vicinity of Leipsic have begun to keep complete cost-of-production records for three years on their farms. The work is being supervised by the Rural Economics Department of the Ohio Experiment Station. A complete inventory was taken on each farm and the work started January 1.

The records collected from these farms will be tabulated and analyzed by the Experiment Station economists so as to enable the farmer to study his farming operations from a business point of view, and to suggest ways and means of improving them.

The cost of production of the various farm products will be secured both in terms of labor and material required and in terms of dollars and cents. It is believed the results will be of great value not only to the farmers co-operating but to others as well.

E. C. Newcomer has been selected by the department as route-man to collect the records and help the farmers in securing accurate data. He will be located at Leipsic and visit the farms each week. The banks of Leipsic are also co-operating in the work.

These are typical farms, ranging in size from 62 to 290 acres, with an average of 125 acres. The type of agriculture varies. On some of the farms a large portion of the income is from the sale of grain, others from beef or dairy cattle, and still others from hogs.

The farms are mostly family farms, with a few having hired labor for the year. Eight of the farmers own tractors.

Nothing Goes to Waste

Dried rabbit skins are used for the manufacture of felt hats. No part of the skin is wasted—the fur goes to hat factories, while the skins, reduced to shreds by the fur-clipping process, are made into glue, and the overhair and waste under are disposed of to manufacturers of fertilizer.

Early Lighthouse

The first lighthouse built by the United States as an independent government is at Cape Henry, at the entrance of Chesapeake bay. It was finished in 1792, when fish oil was used for lighting, sperm oil being substituted in 1810.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

Washington, Jan. 28.—(U.P.)—Senate debate on the $352,661,000 federal tax reduction bill was opened today by Chairman Smoot of the finance committee with the demand that the measure be passed by Feb. 10.

"Immediate consideration and speedy disposition" was asked by the Utah senator and administration financial expert, who spoke at length giving reasons for his committee's action in revising the measure passed by the house which provided only $330,000,000 reduction.

Lowering of surtax rates on incomes from a maximum of 40 to 20 per cent was defended by Smoot as sound economics.

Repeal of the publicity of the income tax was advocated by Smoot because no "useful purpose" has been served by publication.

He also defended the committee's action in repealing the inheritance tax with the house bill retained in part, restoring the tax on legitimate drama, musical concerts and grand operas which the house had eliminated, increasing personal exemptions and refusing to abolish entirely the excise tax on automobiles, trucks and alcohol.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today suspended until May 28, pending investigation, the operation of rate schedules to increase rate on cotton for export moving from New Mexico on the Santa Fe to New Orleans.

A final conference between Senator Hiram Johnson and Rep. Swing, Republicans, California, and other interested parties was held today in an effort to revise the Johnson-Swing Boulder Canyon Dam bill along lines suggested by Secretary of the Interior Work. The bill is expected to be completed this afternoon and submitted to Work. If he approves it, hearings will begin before the House Irrigation Committee tomorrow.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Montana, Democrat, announced today he would present a report to the Senate judiciary committee on Monday on the committee's inquiry into whether the justice department has exercised due diligence in investigating the Aluminum Company of America, controlled by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. The report is understood to criticize the department and suggest a more complete investigation of the case by the Senate.

Boy Walks 25 Miles to School; Pays With Bull

Oneida, Ky.—J. R. Burns and a few associates founded an institute here a few years ago, where educational opportunities were few.

When the school opened this fall, Burns says, a boy walked from Leslie county, 25 miles away, leading a two-year-old bull, which was all he had to pay his tuition and other expenses. The institute accepted him.

Later a six-year-old girl rode a mule from her home in the same county 42 miles from the school. She had nothing to offer as payment for her schooling except the promise of a pig that would be given to the institute.

A fourteen-year-old girl walked six miles to the school, where she explained that her father did not believe in education, but she wanted to learn to be a teacher.

Practical Teaching

A French, German or Spanish luncheon is served each week in the model apartment of the domestic science building of the Pasadena (Cal.) Junior college, under the leadership of the teachers, for pupils studying those languages. The idea is carried out in the menu and table decorations, and as far as possible the language of the country is spoken.

CROCKEYJOY ADVENTURES

By BETTY BROWNE

The Transformation of Purz

RUTH had been doing some sewing for her new doll. The twilight had crept into the room unnoticed by her, till now it was almost dark. She had a feeling, somehow, that she wasn't alone. It frightened her a little, and so she snapped the button which turned on the electric lights. As the lights flashed, she thought she heard an exclamation of surprise from some one.

Sure enough, a moment later she saw her friend, the kindly old Crockeyjoy, come sliding down the wire of the table lamp. Hand over hand he came, very much like the trapeze men in the circus. It was only a moment till he stood on the table facing Ruth. He blew on his hands to warm them, for it was chilly in the room. Each time he puffed, he swelled up his cheeks, and his long gray beard waggled to and fro in a very ludicrous way. Ruth could scarcely keep from laughing outright at him.

"It is too cold here for us to be comfortable," he said after a time. "I think I'll fix it so that you can come and see me and my people whenever you want to. How would you like that?" he added.

"It is the very thing for which I've been wishing," replied Ruth. "But how can you manage it?"

The kindly old Crockeyjoy pushed his sugar-loaf hat to one side and scratched his head in a thoughtful way. He whistled a bit of dance tune and walked back and forth on the table top. Then he slapped his hand on his knee and gave a long, good-natured chuckle.

"The cat with jeweled eyes will be the very one to do it. Bring him here to me." And Ruth went at once across the room and brought back to the table the little silver cat with jewels for eyes which one of her friends had given her as a birthday present. Then the odd fellow rubbed it in a certain way, directly back of the left eye and in front of the left ear; and, would you believe it, that silver cat just began to purr, and to arch up his back, and act like he had always been alive.

"Now get that old picture album, the one with the painting of the old castle on the back side of it, and we'll make a road for you to use whenever you will," said the Crockeyjoy. So Ruth picked up the book from the corner and brought it also to the table top. At a word from the odd fellow, she opened the book. In the back of it was a picture which she had never noticed before. A great, dun-colored tower was shown. All of the windows were heavily barred, but there seemed to be a dim, friendly sort of light shining from in back of them somewhere. Before the castle was a drawbridge and ringed around it was a wide, deep moat. It looked a place to strike fear to the heart of any enemy and perhaps bring joy to the heart of any friend who dared to enter it. Mystery and adventure lurked all about it. The sight of it, and the thought of what it might hold, made Ruth's heart beat a trifle faster.

"Come," said the Crockeyjoy, "today I have but time to lead you to the castle door. And that must be done at once, if at all. Come."

Suddenly Ruth found that she had shrunk to the smallness of Purz and the Crockeyjoy. She took the Crockeyjoy's hand in one of hers, and slipped the other into the furry paw of Purz. Then—straight down the broad road, and into the book, the three of them went. When they reached the drawbridge, the Crockeyjoy told Purz just how to signal the keeper so that the bridge would be lowered for him. By that time they had to return, for it was very near the supper hour.

They hastened out of the book just as Ruth's mother called from the dining-room for her to get ready for supper. "From now on, Purz can always bring you to the castle which is the front door of Crockeyland. I'll expect to see you soon," and with those words the Crockeyjoy climbed back up the light cord and vanished into the shadows.

Ruth told herself that she would visit the Land of Crockey as soon as ever she could. And she did. And, among her adventures there were some very amazing things, which you shall hear of later on.

SQUIBBS AND DRIBS.

Western farmers have a surplus supply of corn and oats that they don't know what to do with. If they will write us, we will give them some confidential information about the corn, but, as for the oats, we haven't heard of any drink that can be made from them.

The River Seine has risen so high during the recent floods that have been occurring in France, that it is reported the French people are seriously considering taking up the matter of drinking water to remove the menace.

One cause of the shortage of rubber and the consequent high prices can be laid at the feet of the women—their goloshes require as much rubber as four balloon tires.

The ex-King of Greece is reported to be coming to Florida to live. With his former experience he ought to be equipped to start a title company.

All of the prohibition enforcement officers have been finger printed. This is usually done only when a man is convicted of a crime, but maybe it is just as well to take time by the forelock.

This Little Pig Went To Market

Thus goes an old familiar nursery rhyme. All of you know it, so we will not repeat it. Now, we do not mean to infer that we are "little pigs," but we just want to tell you that

WE, TOO, WENT TO MARKET

Friday, January 15th, we arrived in Grand Rapids, the Furniture Capital of America, with the thought of learning all we could relative to the newest patterns of furniture for this year. We also decided that we would learn all we could about the proper manner of construction of good furniture.

WE SAW MILES AND MILES

of beautiful furniture. And, folks, how we would have enjoyed taking you along with us. But, as that was impossible, we decided to do the next best thing, and so we ordered part of it shipped down here for the use of the folks about Circleville.

AN INTENSIVE COURSE IN FURNITURE MERCHANDISING

was given to those attending the market, and we took advantage of it. For five days, we attended this "school." And now, after our visit to the market, and after taking this training, we do feel that we are better fitted to render you more efficient service in your furniture buying. Bring your problems to us and we will try to solve them for you. At least, drop in and let us tell you more of what we saw and heard while

The Davidson Hardware store opened its doors to the public today. The new stock is located in the room recently occupied by Frank Mason in the Pythian Castle, North Court street.

Mr. Davidson needs no introduction to the public. He has been a resident of this city for a number of years and has been engaged in the hardware business for the past ten years and is thoroughly posted. He was associated with the Circleville Hardware store as its manager for the past two years. He was a farmer before entering the hardware game and knows what the man on the farm needs. He carries an up-to-date line of implements and a nice line of hardware.
